Tips for being greener tourists: respecting and helping

"Respecting our world and everything that makes us different and unique will enhance your travel experience"

Sustainable tourism aims to develop its activity generating a minimal impact on the environment. The aim is to promote eco-friendly tourism with minimal impact on the environment and local culture. In addition, the economic aspect seeks to generate employment and income for the indigenous population.

Here are some of the keys to being an ecological traveler at the End of the World:

1. LOOK FOR OPTIONS

Planning your trip in advance will allow you to search for environmentally friendly accommodation and activities. Always prioritize brands that take care of energy consumption, water and other resources.

2. SAVE WATER

Efficient water use or wastewater management is another key to achieving this goal. Short showers and close the faucets every time you are not using them. For example: while brushing your teeth

3. AVOID PLASTIC

Always carry a refillable water bottle and reusable bags with you. Reject the plastic whenever you can. We remind you that Ushuaia has municipal policies on single-use plastic banning plastic bags, sale of plastic swabs and consumption of single-use plastics inside dining places.

4. ALWAYS MINIMIZE WASTE MANAGEMENT

Do you know the 3R rule? Reduce, reuse and recycle. The best waste is that which is not generated. Avoid generating waste whenever you can.

5. BRING YOUR WASTE BACK

When you go on an excursion, always bring your waste. Even cigarette butts. Nature is never their place. When it comes to navigating the Beagle Channel, don't throw anything into the water. No food either. This can disrupt the ecosystem.

6. TAKE CARE OF NATURE

Respect our flora and fauna. When it comes to excursions, don't leave the trails, don't step on the peat or pluck wild flowers or plants. Don't take stones or leaves from trees as souvenirs. Nature must remain intact after your visit

7. CONSUME LOCAL

PAlways try to choose local and artisan products. In this way you favor the economy and expression of the local culture. Learn about history, culture and gastronomy.

8. PROTECT OUR HISTORY AND CULTURE

Enjoy historical and cultural sites responsibly. Respect all signs and instructions at each location. Avoid touching, removing, altering, or damaging objects and elements, and help preserve these places for future generations.

Make your trip contribute to responsible and sustainable tourism.
This will allow our planet to remain healthy and supportive.

If you have doubts about waste separation you can ask any member of our team.
When you visit the End of the World, make sure that the only footprint you leave is your footwear!